

VFW Salutes USMC's 237 Years of Service

The USMC has defended this country in every armed conflict since 1775

Nov 09, 2012

November 10, 2012 marks the 237th birthday of the United States Marine Corps. The USMC's legacy of defending this nation in every armed conflict since 1775 bestows upon them a rich tradition and a sense of honor that is felt at the core of every American who has worn the uniform of a U.S. Marine.

Though war and conflict have evolved drastically over the past 237 years, the USMC has remained unwavering in its commitment to successfully complete any mission with which they are tasked—and complete it with the utmost honor and integrity.

Exemplified by their motto, Semper Paratus, our Marines are always faithful to this nation and its people, and ever vigilant and ready at a moment's notice. The values they embrace follow them on land, air and sea. And, as a people, we are fortunate to have such valiant protectors.

The members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and its Auxiliaries proudly salute you for your continued service, sacrifice and dedication to country.

Happy birthday, Marines!
