The Hospitality Career Connection will align candidates with a wide array of positions ranging from culinary arts and food service to restaurant management, construction and environmental services. More than 500 veterans, service members and their spouses participated in last year's virtual career fair.

More than 250,000 servicemen and women will separate from active duty each year for the next five years and the restaurant, foodservice industry is expected to create more than 800,000 new jobs in the next five years.

"The VFW is thrilled to be teaming up with the NRAEF again," said VFW National Commander Brian Duffy, Air Force veteran and retired UPS assistant chief pilot. "Coordinating large-scale hiring initiatives like our June 21 event help to ensure our service members, veterans and their spouses have every opportunity available to help them find the post-military career success they deserve."

"We have a decades-long tradition of supporting our U.S. military veterans and active duty service men and women," said Gordon Lambourne, VP, Communications, NRAEF. "We are excited to again partner with the VFW on this unique opportunity to connect potential employers with members of the military to learn about opportunities in our industry and match their skills, training and talents with meaningful restaurant, foodservice and hospitality jobs and careers."
